“Building Better Builders”

MCBA has begun a voluntary certification program for builders, both for members and non-members.

Builders with two or more years of documented field experience can take the certification test and be certified as to their knowledge of construction and the Maine State Building Code.

Classes have been established by MCBA to prepare builders to pass the exam.

Builders do not need to take a class in order to take the examination.

Certified builder information is made available to prospective customers, financial institutions, municipalities, and may be used in advertising.

Builder certification is available upon completion of other program components:

- The Building requirements of the State Residential Building Code IRC 2009
- Contract Law
- Ethics
- OSHA Safety
- Proof of general liability insurance and worker's compensation insurance (where required)
- Proof of a minimum of two years construction experience

Residential Building Certification Program

Become a certified builder

Currently, the State of Maine does not require builders to be licensed, although each year legislation is proposed to establish such licensing.

Consumers are becoming increasingly aware that their money is safer spent for services using people with validated knowledge and skills.

MCBA recognizes this need and is working to assure its members and colleagues in the industry maintain their competitive edge.

Our builder's certification program prepares participants to pass the certification examination administered by the Construction Certification Institute, Inc.

Classes are three hours long, held one night a week for four weeks. Classes cover the entire Maine Model Residential Building Code. A variety of information is presented and specific topics are addressed using proven techniques to fine tune student's skills:

- Application for the certification examination
- Organizational procedures
- Overviews of subject matter
- Lectures on important code concepts
- Mastering skill builders
- Reviewing important general construction knowledge concepts
- Reading drawings and blue prints
- Daily question and answer sessions
- In-depth review for examination
- Methods for taking the examination

We provide you with material to build your skills for the examination. There are no boring reading assignments. You work with our materials at your own pace, completing them before the examination.
